Alliance Memory Brexit Statement

Following the outcome of the UK referendum on EU membership in 2016, the UK will leave the European Union on 29th March, 2019. Although there is still some uncertainty surrounding the outcome of “Brexit” negotiations between the UK government and the European Union, we expect the position to become clearer over the coming months.

Alliance Memory is taking external advice to ensure that our planning is in line with best business practices in the UK and internationally.

As a privately-owned American company, we do not manufacturer any goods within Europe or the UK.

However, we will be proactively working with our European Distributors and customers to understand the situation from their perspectives so that these can be included in our planning.

If you have any questions with respect to the impact of Brexit on your relationship or business with Alliance Memory, please make contact with us through your franchised distributor or primary contact at Alliance Memory who will ensure your concerns are addressed and included in our planning.

We shall shortly be producing a response to some frequently asked questions that will reflect our understanding of possible implications.
